GRIDLOCK NATION

You'll need to gas up for these traffic trouble spots

WASHINGTON If you commute using one of the 10 most clogged highways in the U.S., you could ride a bicycle to work faster than you could drive, according to a new study that evaluates the countless hours drivers waste in gridlock on roadways each year.

By using GPS-equipped vehicles to record commuting experiences on the nation's roads, analysts studied traffic from a database containing approximately 100 million vehicles including taxis, airport shuttles, service delivery vans, long haul trucks and passenger cars in 2011.

A 13-mile stretch of the San Diego Freeway outside L.A. ranked as the most traffic-choked freeway in the nation. But drivers in Honolulu spent the most time in traffic, averaging 58 hours a year stuck in stop-and-go traffic. Researchers found urban areas actually are seeing traffic congestion decrease at a significant rate nationwide for the first time since 2008. Seventy of the country's Top 100 most populated cities showed a drop in traffic congestion last year.

The study was commissioned by INRIX, a software company based in Kirkland, Wash., that provides traffic- and driver-related mobile apps and online services. CNN

» In cities such as Tampa, Fla., Houston and Austin, Texas, research showed improved jobless numbers led to busier roadways.

» Last year, only 890,000 of the 2.6 million new jobs (about 34 percent) were in urban areas, according to the research.

BEST!

WORST

» Both the best and worst weekday times to be on the road occur on Fridays. Between 6 and 7 in the morning is the best commute time; 5-6 p.m. is the pits.

» Overall, there was a 30 percent drop in traffic congestion nationwide, but it came with a cost. Due in part to weak employment conditions and higher fuel prices, there are fewer drivers heading to the office, and those who do drive are driving less, the study found.

8 of 10

» Eight of the 10 worst stretches of road for average travel time and delays were in New York or L.A.

40

» On average, Americans spend around 40 hours per year behind the wheel in commuter bottlenecks.

» The worst morning commute is on Tuesday. When's the best time to be on the road? The research says Monday. "People tend to take a little more time getting to the office" on Mondays, INRIX communications chief Jim Bak said. "Also, when people take a long three-day weekend, it's often on Monday."

CTA riders to see red on North Side

GOING PUBLIC

Tracy Swartz

 » @tracyswartz

Starting this week, the Red Line may become the "Dread Line" for some North Side riders.

On Friday, the CTA will close the Granville stop in Edgewater for up to six weeks as part of its program to rehab seven of the most deplorable stations on the North Side Red Line.

Granville is the first of seven stations to close, and the CTA is encouraging riders to use the Thorndale stop, which is less than half a mile away, or the Loyola stop, which is about half a mile away.

The station closure likely will bring slower trains. The area around the Granville stop already is under slow zone, according to a map posted this month to the CTA website. More than 20 percent of Red Line track is under slow zone—second to the Brown Line in terms of lines with the highest percentage of these zones.

About 4,000 riders use the Granville stop each weekday, and if they so choose, they will be joining about 3,000 riders who use the Thorndale stop on weekdays or 5,500 riders who use the Loyola stop, according to March ridership statistics from the CTA. The station is expected to reopen July 13.

During this time, the CTA said it will paint the station's viaduct and improve the lighting under it. Also on the agenda: new windows, doors, stationhouse lighting and bike racks.

The CTA plans to make similar improvements to the other six stations. Under this project, the agency is set to close the Morse stop June 29, the Thorndale and Argyle stops in August, the Berwyn and Lawrence stops in October and the Jarvis stop in November.

A CTA spokesman said the Granville stop was picked to go first because of scheduling. The Granville stop suffers from a lack of lighting and a platform that's too narrow, but it is not the most disgusting station on the north side of the Red Line—that distinction likely goes to the Sheridan stop in Lakeview or Uptown's Wilson stop, the three-time winner of Going Public's Crust Station contest, which names the most repugnant station based on reader feedback.

The CTA has an idea to transform the Wilson stop into a transfer station with access to the Purple Line Express. The agency said it also plans to make improvements to the Sheridan stop.

In other Red Line news, the Chicago Department of Transportation said it is set to begin overhauling the Clark/Division stop on the Near North Side on July 1. The station will remain open during the rehab, which includes mezzanine work.

Chatter's up

Teams from TransitChatter, a new app by Chicago developers that lets riders on the same train or bus connect for chats or games, have been promoting their new app at Red Line stations. Go to transitchatter.com for information.

STATIONARY

A weekly dispatch from a CTA station of note

This week: 35th/Archer Orange Line

This McKinley Park stop is for the birds—it seems the pigeons have taken over this station. Going Public caught a few pigeons hanging out among the spikes, installed to deter birds, above the platform Friday. Because of these unwanted visitors, riders should watch where they step. Pigeon excrement decorates the floor and the wall near one escalator. That's not fly.

CHILD'S PLAY

Growing up is sooo overrated—at least when Millennials need a nostalgia fix

By Taylor Ervin

REDEYE

Red and yellow rubber balls whiz back and forth across the gymnasium at Blaine Elementary School in Lakeview, smacking against the polished cinder-block walls and stinging exposed arms and legs.

No, this is not an afternoon gym class full of third-graders. These are grown men and women chucking balls at one another—and paying for the privilege as part of the Chicago Sport and Social Club's adult dodge ball league.

Steve Healy, 28, of Noble Square has been playing for the past five years.

"It was almost a joke at first," he said, "but now actually a lot of my friends have come from playing dodge ball."

Teammate Mike Vertucci, 32, of Evanston, said nostalgia initially drew him to the league, but it's become more than that.

"I've been playing for so long now that I don't think about it like that," he said. "I definitely play more now than I did in grade school, but that's because I'm not good at real sports."

Count them both among the growing ranks of young professionals in Chicago and across the country who are eager to relive their childhood through organizations, events and other activities that tap into the fond memories they have of the '80s and '90s.

Organizers at Chicago Sport and Social Club have registered six times as many dodge ball teams this year as they did in 2009, but they're not the only ones offering up a slice of childhood to the hungry masses. Grown-up proms, like the ones hosted by Chicago nonprofit 826Chi, regularly sell out and feature wacky themes such as "Prom Hanks" or "Keep Promme and Carry On." There are even adult summer camps, such as the ones hosted by Singles Travel Service in Connecticut, which offer Millennials another swing at mastering balloon toss and arts and crafts.

It's easy to dismiss all this as one generation's desperate attempt to hold on to the last shreds

THE 'NICK' EFFECT

Marketing research professionals are no strangers to the allure of nostalgia. Re-envisioning retro cartoons such as "Transformers" as blockbuster movies preys on the wallets of young professionals who are prone to nostalgia. Nickelodeon jumped on the bandwagon last summer, when it launched the "90s Are All That" programming block featuring shows from the '90s like "Kenan and Kel," "Clarissa Explains It All" and "Doug" (right).

"It was really in response to the audience," Teen Nick General Manager Keith Dawkins said. "I think we here at Nickelodeon started to recognize that this group of 20-somethings were kind of galvanizing the digital space by talking about the Nickelodeon that they grew up with."

Since the block took over from midnight to 2 a.m. in June, ratings have skyrocketed. The viewership in that time slot has doubled in the past year, and the total daily average of Nickelodeon viewers ages 18-34 jumped 75 percent, according to data provided by the network.

"Nickelodeon was one place completely committed to the idea of where kids rule, Dawkins said. "That was a really powerful idea for kids at that time." T.E.

of childhood, but experts say the tendency toward all things throwback is actually part of a broader trend of global economic uncertainty that has young professionals jonesing for a time when their lives were much simpler.

"People in their late 20s and early 30s are experiencing many life transitions," said Clay Routledge, psychology professor at North Dakota State University. Routledge has spent the last seven years studying the function of nostalgia in the brain, and he says people are most prone to nostalgia during periods of high stress and uncertainty.

"Our research shows that these sort of uncertainties trigger nostalgia because nostalgia restores a sense of security and a sense of comfort," Routledge said.

Chicago Sport and Social Club president Jason Erkes has witnessed this phenomenon firsthand. Childhood sports have proven so popular in recent years that Erkes is considering expanding the options he offers.

"There's a huge interest in what we call flashback sports," he said. "We've contemplated adding Wiffle ball and bombardment onto the list, but right now kickball and dodge ball are really popular with young professionals as a way to kind of go out and relive that childhood memory."

Mark Braunstein has known about the power of fond memories for a while. To him, it just makes sense. That's why he created a summer camp for adults 11 years ago.

"It's everything you did as a kid just now doing it as an adult," Braunstein said. "It's sort of an obvious connection to cast it as a time capsule."

The camp in southern Connecticut hosts singles in their 20s and 30s during various weeks throughout the summer. Campers sleep in cabins outfitted with bunks, eat in a dining hall, play volleyball and make arts and crafts. Braunstein has seen a steady increase in campers during the past decade, and the camp has spawned imitators in the Midwest.

"Essentially it's exactly what you would imagine it to be if you'd been to camp as a child," Braunstein said.

Family of missing hiker awaiting DNA results

Chicago Tribune

The sister of a Chicago hiker missing since October 2010 said it will be about a month before authorities in Colorado are able to determine whether remains found Friday near an abandoned campsite are those of her brother.

James Nelson, 31, of Ravenswood, never returned from a five-day, 25-mile hike of the Holy Cross Wilderness Area in Colorado.

Police there said because of certain items found at the campsite, "there's a strong reason to believe" it was Nelson's. The human remains were found about 120 feet from the campsite.

In 2010, his fiancée reported Nelson missing when he failed to show up at an arranged meeting spot five days after he started his hike. Rescue teams spent the next four days scouring the mountainside for him before the search was called off.

Nelson's sister, Christy Waters, said Monday that police will use DNA tests and dental records to determine whether the remains belong to her brother.

"We're in shock, of course. All the sores are opened again," said Waters, who was flying home to Iowa City from a vacation in Nevada so she could be with her family. "This will be a really rough day."

Nelson, who was involved with the Chicago Backpackers Meetup Group, was working on a doctorate in religion and planned to teach theology at a university.

"We all have our ups and downs in life, but he was in his prime," Waters said. "He had finally found someone that loved him. He finally had found his passion and what he was meant to be doing."

She spoke of how much her daughter, who was 3 when Nelson disappeared, still talks about her uncle.

Small fire on 'L' tracks

Service on parts of the CTA's Orange and Green lines was temporarily disrupted Monday following a small fire on an "L" structure south of Roosevelt Road, authorities said. Railroad ties on the elevated structure near 1529 S. State St. ignited about 3:30 p.m., according to the Chicago Fire Department. The fire was extinguished by about 4:20 p.m.

Thieves target brass mail slots

Thieves targeted solid brass mail slot covers at homes owned mostly by elderly residents of Burnside over the weekend, police said. At least five homes in the 8900 block of South Cornell Avenue and one in the 8900 block of South East End Avenue had the decorative brass mail slots and covers stolen between 6 p.m. Saturday and 2 p.m. Sunday.

Woman dies after Gold Coast fall

A 54-year-old woman died Monday after she either fell or jumped from a multi-level parking garage on the Gold Coast, police said. The woman dropped from the 11th floor at the public parking garage in the 300 block of East Erie Street about 1:30 a.m., police said. She was dead at the scene.

Boat distress call unfounded

Chicago Fire Department rescuers responded Monday afternoon to a call of a boat in distress but the call was unfounded, officials said. Shortly before 4 p.m., rescuers were alerted to head to the lake, but when they arrived there was no boat in distress, according to Fire Media information. TRIBUNE

4 ARLINGTON, Va. President Obama honored veterans Monday by noting "the light of a new day" of having U.S. troops home from Iraq and returning soon from Afghanistan, while promising not to send soldiers back to war without a clear need.

Obama did not mention tension with Iran and Syria in his remarks to veterans and military families at a hot, sunny Memorial Day ceremony, focusing instead on the wars started by his predecessor, George W. Bush, that he wound down.

"After a decade under the dark cloud of war, we can see the light of a new day on the horizon," he said at Arlington National Cemetery, drawing applause when he noted the "milestone" of it being the first Memorial Day in nine years without Americans fighting and dying in Iraq.

"As commander in chief, I can tell you that sending our troops into harm's way is the most wrenching decision that I have to make," Obama said shortly after laying a wreath at the Tomb of the Unknown Soldier.

"I can promise you I will never do so unless it is absolutely necessary and that when we do, we must give our troops a clear mission and the full support of a grateful nation."

Defense Secretary Leon Panetta, introducing Obama at the Arlington military cemetery, said that 58,000 Americans died in the Vietnam War. More than 4,000 Americans died in Iraq from 2003 to 2011, and nearly 2,000 have died in Afghanistan from the war's start in 2001 to date.

The Cubs celebrate their win over San Diego on Monday at Wrigley Field—their first victory since May 14. PHIL VELASQUEZ/TRIBUNE

DEAD STREAK

IT HAD TO END SOMETIME, RIGHT? CUBS NOT DWELLING ON 12-GAME SKID

RedEye

Cubs general manager Jed Hoyer called it “torture.” President Theo Epstein said it was painful. Manager Dale Sveum simply stated it’s no fun.

“It” was the Cubs’ losing streak of 12 games heading into Monday’s game vs. San Diego at Wrigley Field.

“Sometimes, when you rip the scab off, there’s some pain until we grow some new skin,” Epstein said. “We’re going places. This is a tough road.”

That road came to a dead end Monday with a little help from Mother Nature. With the wind blowing out, the Cubs clubbed four home runs in an 11-7 win over the Padres. The victory momentarily eased the pain of the losing streak that was just two losses shy of the team record. But it was on the minds of the Cubs, dominating the pregame talk.

“There’s nothing fun about losing, especially losing 12 games in a row,” Sveum said. “But you don’t do anything different. Managing in the seventh inning, you’re not thinking, ‘Wow, we’ve lost 12 in a row, I’ve got to do this.’ You’re doing everything you can, just as if you’ve won 12 in a row.”

That attitude paid off Monday, and Epstein said he doesn’t feel the Cubs are throwing in the towel.

“I see the guys fighting. I see them competing. I don’t see anyone quitting. I don’t see anyone completely losing it. That’s a good sign,” he said. “I think they’re going to work their way out of it. We knew there would be difficult periods. This is where character reveals itself.”

And what is the Cubs’ character? Epstein said the streak isn’t “indicative of the type of team” the Cubs are.

“I think we’re clearly better than this,” he said. “We had five pretty good series against decent teams coming into this stretch. Were we quite that good? No. Are we quite this bad? No. I think when you’re not the most talented team on the field on a regular basis, you have to play well to compete. If you don’t play well, you run the risk of stretches like this.”

Hoyer said the losing streak “is torture for all of us,” but he believes “better times” are ahead.

“There’s no question in my mind we’re going to build a consistent winner here,” he said. “This is a really painful bump that we’re going through right now on the way to get there.”

TRIBUNE CONTRIBUTED

SALE K’S 15 IN 2-1 WIN

Chris Sale didn’t disappoint several family members and friends who watched him pitch at Lakeland High School and at Florida Gulf Coast University.

Sale struck out 15 batters Sunday to set a Tropicana Field record. And Sale was rewarded when Adam Dunn hit a two-run home run in the top of the sixth inning to give the White Sox a 2-1 lead over Tampa Bay at Tropicana. That score would stand as the final.

Sale struck out the side in the first and sixth innings thanks to a sharp slider. But his biggest K occurred with two out and the tying run at third base in the seventh, when he struck out Jose Molina for the final out of the inning. TRIBUNE

WATCH

Fire at New England

6:30 p.m. Saturday, CSN

The Men in Red travel to Gillette Stadium to take on the Revolution in an MLS match-up. The Fire and Revolution represent one of the league’s intense rivalries. The two have met 15 times in postseason play, with the results an evenly split 7-7-1. Besides, no one likes Boston-area sports teams.

ATTEND

Sky vs. Washington

7:30 p.m. Friday, Allstate Arena

Basketball in Chicago lives! The Sky are 1-1 on the young WNBA season with a new-look team, led by returning center Sylvia Fowles, who’s averaging 22 points a game, good for third in the league.

ATTEND

Windy City Rollers

6 p.m. Saturday, UIC Pavilion

Not only is this the Ivy Cup championship featuring the Manic Attackers vs. The Fury, but it’s also a fundraising event for Tequila Mockingbird, a veteran skater who injured her spinal cord in a fall during a match in 2007.

ATTEND

Rush vs. Spokane

3 p.m. Sunday, Allstate Arena

New mascot alert! The Rush will introduce Bruiser the Bulldog in a pregame ceremony. Don’t worry, though, longtime mascot Grabowski remains a part of the team. So, yes, the Rush will be using the rarely seen two-mascot format.

1 What Chicago sports team/athlete did you honor on Memorial Day?	Major Wright, Lance "Corporal" Briggs and a "dancer" I know named Private Partz.	Patrick Kane's liver. Never forget.	My beloved Chicago Cubs. October 1908-May 2012 (and counting).	The Bulls. They lost more men than Commander Cody ever does on "The Clone Wars" cartoon.	None of 'em. I honored the heroes who fight on a real, not figurative, battlefield.
2 Brian Urlacher might test free agency. How would you react if he left the Bears?	Let's just say it would not offend me to see him in a Seahawks uniform.	Kind of like how when your overrated grandparent dies.	The same way I react to those little blue gas station pills: It would be hard.	Don't. Stop. Don't. Stop. Don't. Stop. Don't. Stop.	Remember Ace Ventura right after he made the Finkle-Einhorn connection? Something like that.
3 Why is HBO having trouble getting a team to be the subject of "Hard Knocks"?	The Bengals would do it again but I think they're holding out for "The Wire."	They're worried Lena Dunham will take baths with them.	They should just switch it to "Hard Knox" and follow around our favorite injured receiver.	I'm wondering why they don't just turn it into "Real Housewives of the NFL."	Nobody wants to be the next Antonio Cromartie and forget how many kids he has on national TV.
4 How has the Northwestern women's lacrosse team has won seven titles in 8 years?	The men's basketball team is still waiting on that first NCAA tourney, so you connect the dots.	Their competition lax.	Might be time to start testing the purple Kool-Aid up in Evanston.	It's called being really, really good, fellas. Our male sports teams should look into that.	By outsmarting the competition. Obviously.
5 What was the best sporting event of the long weekend?	The White Sox winning streak. This is about the best it's gonna get, Chicago, until at least September.	How Many Times Will I Be Made Fun of For Being Vegetarian at the BBQ. I won.	The thong sandal run-off in Wrigleyville, them dudes can jet!	I completed the Iron Beer Triathlon: Pull (the tab), lift (the can) and drink.	My drinking, sleeping and eating triathlon was pretty outstanding.

A singer? No joke

Bob Saget pulls off the anthem at U.S. Cellular Field

By Matt Lindner

FOR REDEYE

Bob Saget, the man best known as quintessential '90s TV sitcom dad Danny Tanner, is standing behind home plate about to sing the national anthem before Saturday's White Sox game in front of a half-full house at U.S. Cellular Field when a reporter asks him if he's feeling any nerves.

"A little," he admits with a sheepish grin.

Saget steps to the microphone and completely nails it, his rich baritone hitting all the right notes much to the delight of the 20,000 or so on hand to witness it and, quite frankly, himself as well.

"I didn't tank and you wanted to do this interview before the anthem, and we know that I survived and I deserve my hot dogs," a relieved Saget said afterward.

Google "Bob Saget singing" and the first result you'll find is him singing a tune from his act called "Danny Tanner is Not Gay." In other words, the anthem is not exactly in his wheelhouse, which is why he prepared for his big moment everywhere he could.

"I was singing it on the plane [from Kansas City] and people, they can't really get mad at you for humming the national anthem to yourself," he said. "But if you're in a plane and you're singing the national anthem, it's kind of like some weird thing where people are scared."

In addition to hot dogs, which a Sox staffer provided him shortly after, Saget earned another reward for his stellar performance—a hug from Southpaw, the team's green, furry mascot.

"Southpaw's very interesting," he said. "Doesn't smell like other mascots. Very clean."

“ I didn't tank and you wanted to do this interview before the anthem, and we know that I survived and I deserve my hot dogs.”

—Comedian and actor Bob Saget

I don't know if it was Febreze or what but it was awesome."

Saget will spend the summer on tour before taping a one-hour special. He's also set to direct a movie later this year in addition to his role as the narrator on "How I Met Your Mother."

He swears he's never told his own kids a story as long as the one he's been telling his fictional kids on the show and offered some insight on how things are going to wrap up for Ted Mosby and the gang.

"I think it's gonna end up like '50 Shades of Grey,' and I can't say anything more than that," he said with a laugh.

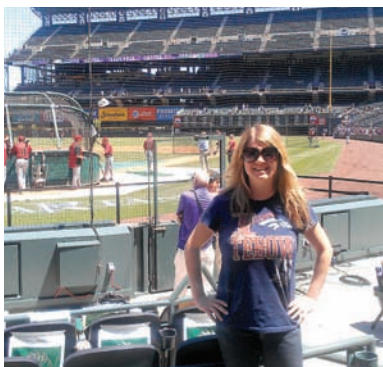

While you'd think he might get sick of people coming up to him and referring to him as Danny Tanner nearly 20 years after the "Full House" ended its run, he said the exact opposite is true.

"It is an honor; it's a cool damn thing," he said. "It never gets old when people are kind and people are very nice to me, so they yell stuff out."

TRACY'S TREK

RedEye reporter Tracy Swartz is on a quest to visit all 30 major league ballparks before she turns 30. Here's her report from Coors Field in Denver.

COLORADO 9, HOUSTON 7

I checked Coors Field off my list last year, but I caught Monday's game because I was in town for a half-marathon. Last year, the big surprise was the weather. The day started at 70 degrees and ended in snow. On Monday, the attention was focused on observing Memorial Day. The nearby U.S. Air Force Academy supplied the band, and the Rockies supplied the fireworks, thanks to multiple home runs. I missed the second game of the double-header because I had to fly home to Chicago, but I still was able to join the Mile High Club by sitting in the special row of seats painted purple because they are a mile above sea level.

Lewis files for bankruptcy

Former Baltimore and Cleveland running back Jamal Lewis has filed for bankruptcy, according to TMZ. Court records show he owes more than $10.5 million in debts, earned $35,000 per month and has $14.5 million in assets. Lewis, 32, last played in 2009.

Two seasons in, you'd think the lovable stoner bros from Comedy Central's "Workaholics" would have defiled every pillar of professionalism at TeleAmericorp, not to mention done every drug there is.

Oops, they've never taken a business trip—or dropped acid—which makes the Season 3 premiere, "The Business Trip," a delightfully hallucinatory binge of laughter.

As the episode begins, Adam, Blake and Ders (stars and creators Adam DeVine, Blake Anderson and Evanston native Anders Holm) are acid-proofing their house for their big trip when Ders gets the call from their boss, Alice (Second City alum Maribeth Monroe)

Workaholics

9:30 p.m. Tuesday, Comedy Central that he must accompany her to a business convention. That doesn't sit well with Adam and Blake, who try to stop Ders from leaving the house only to be zapped by perimeter shock collars they've donned "because the house is acid proof, but the world ... is not acid proof."

The business/acid trip evolves (dissolves?) into a series of mishaps involving Jell-O, God, a hotel ice machine and my favorite of many hilarious lines, "I think she said, 'I want you to eat my pudding.'"

Welcome to another 10 episodes of drug-soaked, sex-fueled, juvenile and often scatological humor delivered so shamelessly you can't help but laugh.

The TeleAmericorp bros might not be professional, but the "Workaholics" cast members are pros.

Not even a nice place to visit

Consider the possible outcomes of piling into a van for an off-limits tour of a deserted disaster area with potentially dangerous radiation levels:

A. Everything goes smoothly while you take insensitive photos of crumbling buildings and empty fields, plus that cute shot of you kissing in front of a reactor. The excursion fails to justify your logic that while in Europe “we might as well see as much as we can.”

B. The rundown van breaks and “extreme” tour guide Uri (Dimitri Diatchenko), whose sales pitch is “Imagine you have big city and no one’s there,” finds that after five years of tours without encountering hungry animals or more monstrous beings, his luck finally has run out.

In “Chernobyl Diaries,” a group of unlikely 20-somethings (including Chicago native Jonathan Sadowski, Devin Kelley of “The Chicago Code” and singer Jesse McCartney) move from outcome A to B when they can’t resist the chance to tour, wait, what’s Chernobyl again? “Isn’t that where the nuclear disaster happened?” one of them asks.

Yes it is, but lest the notion of turning the site of real-life tragedy into a generic horror movie seem offensive, “Chernobyl Diaries” mostly takes place in the evacuated town of Pripyat right next to the power plant. So that’s totally in good taste.

Chernobyl Diaries

Unfortunately the story, if you can call an exploitative idea with mind-numbingly stupid behavior and zero explanation a story, comes from “Paranormal Activity” creator Oren Peli. Director Bradley Parker competently builds tension of the usual silence-silence-silence-SOMETHING-LOUD variety, but anyone who’s ever seen a horror movie will predict the jumps and exclaim only during the constant unintentional laughs.

For example: The remarkable ease of sneaking into the restricted area (nice try, small road block!) or the dwindling number of survivors hiding from killer dogs in a wide-open space. There, they find a bus riddled with bullet holes, prompting the line, “Who would shoot at a bus?” Because that’s what’s weird about this situation—the type of vehicle that was attacked.

“We need to be smart about this,” says Amanda (Kelley), long after everyone has ignored every possible red flag but before they realize increasing radiation levels mean worse consequences than louder beeping on the radiation detect-o-meter. Although, hey, Uri said they wouldn’t be there long enough to risk exposure, so why worry?

ROMANCE PLANET

BY JENNIFER SHEPHERD | READ MORE AT LIPSTICKMYSTIC.COM

Gemini May 21-June 21

Three planets are working together to bring you lusty, happy vibes. There's a high probability that your fondest dreams will come true. Maybe you'll finally succeed in dating a cheerleader.

Cancer June 22-July 22

The moon is helping you get in touch with your soft and sensitive side. You could find yourself writing love poems about the guy or girl who got away. Fortunately, this episode will soon pass.

Leo July 23-Aug. 22

A new flirtation could have an on-and-off-again quality, thanks to Mercury. One minute, you're madly in lust. The next, you're just mad. It's far too early to know what's really going on. Keep playing the part of a sexual detective.

Virgo Aug. 23-Sept. 22

You'll be connecting with your partner in an intensely sexual way, thanks to the moon. Sometimes you can be inhibited, but not this week. You'll be having fun experimenting and expressing yourself in lusty style.

Libra Sept. 23-Oct. 23

As a charming Air sign, you have a fatal tendency to make promises you have no intention of keeping. Don't do that this week, OK? Venus will tempt you to set a wedding date, map out a plan for having six kids or other things that are unlikely to happen.

Scorpio Oct. 24-Nov. 21

You could be in the process of renegotiating a relationship. Jupiter is telling you to keep bargaining for what you want instead of settling. Don't let your significant other intimidate you.

Sagittarius Nov. 22-Dec. 21

With the sun opposite your sign, you might hit an inconvenient romantic roadblock. Maybe your guy will casually confess that he has six children by other women. Oops.

Capricorn Dec. 22-Jan. 19

You're in one of your analytical moods. The moon is inspiring you to make lists of what is and isn't working in your relationship. Then you'll come up with a master strategy. You're so cute when you pretend you're in charge.

Aquarius Jan. 20-Feb. 18

The sun has you lost in a fantasy land, daydreaming about your ideal sexual partner. But since it isn't likely that George Clooney is going to call you, you'll have to return to Earth before long.

Pisces Feb. 19-March 20

Sometimes you are far too hard on yourself. This isn't one of those times. The moon opposite your sign is helping you see what's really going on in your romantic life. Don't be depressed; be empowered. Start working toward finding a solution.

Aries March 21-April 19

With the moon opposite your sign, you could be questioning romantic decisions you've made. Perhaps it wasn't such a good idea to marry your baby daddy just because he asked.

Taurus April 20-May 20

Your honey might require extra help and attention. Since you're a generous Earth sign, you'll immediately offer home-cooked meals, sing sweet songs and give general encouragement. But Mars says what your sweetheart really needs is mindless, guiltless sex.

SIGHTINGS

» Eddie Vedder (above) partied with former Blackhawk Chris Chelios and the now retired Kerry Wood at Stanley's Kitchen & Tap in Lincoln Park on May 20 and turned the bar's famous live band karaoke into an impromptu performance. The Pearl Jam rocker sang about five songs, including The Band's "The Weight" and The Who's "Baba O'Riley" (aka "Teenage Wasteland").

» Jenny McCarthy, the New York Jets' Darrelle Revis, Far East Movement and DJ Steve Aoki were on hand for LMFAO's performance at Studio Paris on Sunday.

» Jennifer Hudson and the Blackhawks' Dave Bolland dined separately Sunday at Japonais.

» Ludacris and the Atlanta Hawks' Joe Johnson hung out separately May 19 at Market.

» Pete Wentz had drinks Wednesday on the patio of Bangers & Lace in Wicker Park.

» David Koechner (aka Todd Packer from "The Office") was spotted Wednesday at Harry Caray's Italian Steakhouse in River North.

» Adam Dunn threw a birthday party for his wife at Mercadito's downstairs lounge, Double A, on May 20 and was joined by several White Sox teammates, including A.J. Pierzynski, Jake Peavy and Gordon Beckham, and Sox manager Robin Ventura.

» The Cubs' Alfonso Soriano dined at Mastro's Steakhouse on May 19.

Keke Palmer, all grown up

ABOUT LAST NIGHT

Luis Gomez

» @aboutluisgomez

Keke Palmer didn't think Hollywood would be easy after earning a SAG award nomination for her role in the 2004 TV miniseries "The Wool Cap" and starring in the critically acclaimed 2006 film "Akeelah and the Bee" before she was even a teenager, but the Harvey native and former Robbins resident admits her early success made her a bit naive.

She thought every film would have an effect on its audience like "Akeelah," which revolved around a poor girl who participates in the national spelling bee. Now 18, Palmer has learned those sorts of scripts are hard to come by.

That's not to say Palmer is another child star who has struggled to find work as she got older. She has remained in the spotlight thanks to her starring role on the Nickelodeon series "True Jackson, VP" and co-starring roles in the films "The Longshots" and "Joyful Noise." She also lent her voice to the upcoming animated sequel "Ice Age: Continental Drift."

But in the modern-day Cinderella TV movie "Rags," which aired Monday on Nickelodeon, Palmer plays the pop star love interest of an aspiring singer (Max Schneider) who lives with his cruel stepfather and—you guessed it—annoying stepbrothers. Palmer and actor Nick Cannon served as producers on the film.

"As a kid, there are a lot of things you can't do," Palmer said. "But now I'm growing up and doing things closer to my age. I'm excited about the new range of roles. I'm excited to talk about certain things in my music and acting career that I wasn't able to talk about before."

Which part of being an adult in Hollywood is she least excited about?

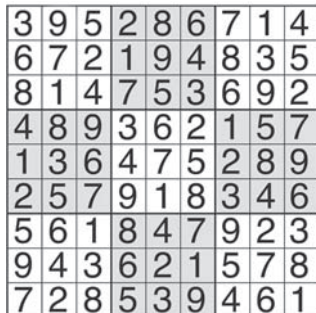

"Sex scenes," Palmer said without hesitation. "You wouldn't think I'm a private person, but I am when it comes to something this intimate. If it's a guy I don't know well, I would be nervous. I hate to say never. If it's done in a classy way, I would be OK with it. But I'm not going to rush into it. I prefer to do things slowly and gradually, so that it's not so much of a shock. The problem with some young movie stars is that they move too quickly."

Throne watch

Hip-hop's royal couple is going back to the studio. Kanye West and Jay-Z will team up for a sequel to "Watch the Throne," according to Mike Dean, a producer who worked with them on the first album. "I'm working on the G.O.O.D. Music album, of course," Dean told Quiet Lunch magazine. "And Watch The Throne 2—it's not started yet, but it's coming."

Bieber beatdown?

Is Justin Bieber getting a little too adult? Eonline.com reports the singer is wanted for questioning by the Los Angeles County sheriffs department after an incident with a photographer Sunday. The man called 911 to complain of chest pains after Bieber roughed the photog up for taking pictures of him and Selena Gomez. Use your head, dude!

Party like a pop star

We've seen the giant rock, and now there's even more proof that Justin Timberlake and Jessica Biel are headed down the aisle. The stars held an engagement party for friends and family Saturday at the home of stylist Estee Stanley, eonline.com reports. The A-List guests included Ellen DeGeneres, Amy Adams and former N'Sync-er Lance Bass.

THE DIGIT

$70 MILLION "Men In Black 3's" box office take over the extended Memorial Day weekend. The film easily will become Smith's 13th film to earn more than $100 million at the box office, ew.com reports.

Hunka hunka

David Beckham is shirtless again—this time as ELLE U.K.'s first male cover model. In the July issue, Beckham is shown emerging from a pool in skintight jeans. His interview shows a different side, however: "How would I sum myself up? I don't know, I prefer other people to do that. Erm ... a little bit shy. I don't know what to say. I hate describing myself," he tells the magazine.

“Tonight I'm gonna get chocolate wasted!”

—Four months after giving birth to daughter Blue Ivy, Beyoncé returned to the stage in Atlantic City over the weekend, telling her concert audience “y'all have no idea how hard I worked” to get back in shape. The singer said she had to lose 60 pounds, usmagazine.com reports.

The Brit list

Britney Spears' "X Factor" rider has been made public, and it is not pretty. Among the highlights, according to Look magazine:

- » 34 Herve Leger dresses
- » 12 Snickers bars
- » 10 snack-size bags of Doritos
- » six cases of Diet Coke containing 24 cans, which must be replenished every week
- » 12 vases of magnolia blossoms in her dressing room
- » 10 pieces of chicken
- » four pints of potato salad every week
